The Calumets would have won the first game easily if they had had six men. The Press Club took the second game by a big majority, Naylor making the remarkable ecore of the evening, 270. The work of this player, by the way, has shown marked improvement since the season opened; he is easily the "king pin" of the Press Club organization. The latter team is now almost out of last place in the championship race. The scores: FIRST GAME.

The tragedy occurred in the Hotel Eiffel, opposite the city hall, this city, where McNabb and the woman had arrived last night, registering as E. J. McNabb and wife. To-day Mrs. Rockwell, who is a daughter of T. J. Lewis, a prominent man of Braddock, Pa., visited her parents, and returned to the hotel at 8:30 this evening. McNabb followed her to their room, and shortly afterwards shots were heard. The door was broken in by the hotel people, when both were found lying on the floor covered with blood. The woman was conscious and said the floor covered with blood. The woman was conscious and said McNabb had shot her, but gave no reason for the deed. McNabb shot himself in the mouth, and was dead when entrance to tromities. McNabb shot himself in the month, and was dead when entrance to the room was forced. His body was taken to the morgue, and Mrs. Rockwell is now lying in the Homeopathic hospital, in a very critical condition. The physicians say she has scarcely any chance for recovery.

As yet, no reason for the double shooting has been learned, but it is generally believed that the counie were almost penniless and that McNabb took this means to end all their troubles.
